Office: 204 Arlington Original Building
Office Hours: Thurs. 4:30p-6:30p and by appointment.

Objective of Course: This course will prepare students for work in the field of national security strategy and policy. It will also serve to enhance the careers of students who are already practitioners in defense policy. The course will use student-led discussions, student-written memos and policy backgrounders, guest speakers, and lectures to form a foundation for the major institutions involved in the U.S. national security apparatus. Students will analyze core decision making processes and key issues facing policymakers today.

The goal of the MPP program in the School of Public Policy is to prepare students for a career in public policy or to improve the development of their current careers. This career preparation includes study of the executive or legislative branches of government, private-sector businesses dealing with public policy, and non-profit organizations concerned with public policy.

Class Format

The class is structured as a seminar rather than lecture format. Students are expected to complete all of the week's assigned readings; be prepared to answer questions from the instructor in the Socratic dialogue; and be ready to critically analyze and discuss the readings with the rest of the class. You will serve as "discussion leader" for one of the week's reading assignments. The purpose of this requirement is to prepare you for speaking in public, delivering presentations and briefings, and serving on conference panels.

Course Evaluation

1. 25%--Class Participation

- I keep track of each student's quantity and quality of constructive comments and assign grades for participation after each class.
- I expect students to attend each class; however, excused absences with prior approval are permitted. Please notify me in an e-mail prior to your absence. Inform me of any unforeseen events and we will make the necessary arrangements to for you to make up the work. But please remember 'A' students usually have perfect attendance.

2. 20%--Discussion Leader

Every student will be assigned the task of leading a class discussion once during the semester. As a discussion leader you will be responsible for preparing questions that are designed to assist your classmates in highlighting important aspects of the week's reading. You will be responsible for moderating and orchestrating a useful and intelligent seminar on the readings of the week. Depending on class size, in all likelihood two people will be co-leaders for any given week. You are also responsible for contacting your co-leader and collaborating on that week's discussion preparations.

3. 15%--Three Two-Page Policy Memos

Basic Structure:

- Short executive summary paragraph (this includes your overall recommendation)
- Background and history of topic
- Policy options
- Description of how you evaluated options
- Recommendation, including your reasoning behind it

Format:

- Two full pages—not more not less
- 12-point Times New Roman
- Single-spaced; skipping a line between paragraphs
- Parenthetical notation (Turabian); No Footnotes

Evaluation:

- Memos will be graded on how well and succinctly you frame the issue involved; the reasoning behind your recommendations. Writing should be direct and not verbose.

Due Date: You must turn in three policy memos during the semester. You can choose the date, but you are encouraged to turn in at least two before the middle of the term and not wait until the end of the semester to turn them all in.

4. 20%--One 8-10 page Policy Backgrounder

Each student will write an 8-10 page double-spaced policy backgrounder that develops a national security theme, topic, or strategy item. An effective approach and structure for the policy backgrounder is a Congressional Research Service “issue brief,” samples of which can be found online. Papers should be double-spaced with Times New Roman 12-point font.

- Please use parenthetical notation in the Turabian (Chicago) style format.
- Ex. (Jones 2006, pg. 21) or Jones (2006).
 - Use a “Works Cited” reference list:
 - “Jones. 2006. “Policy Analysis for Graduate Students.” Public Policy Today. 86: 21-54.
 - Please cite at least eight academic peer-reviewed journal articles and books. You can also include magazine, newspapers, think tank reports, etc.

5. 20%--Take-Home Final

A take-home final will be distributed during the last class on December 6. I will give you more details on the format of the exam later in the semester. (Final Exam due December 13).

SPP Policy on Plagiarism

The profession of scholarship and the intellectual life of a university as well as the field of public policy inquiry depend fundamentally on a foundation of trust. Thus any act of plagiarism strikes at the heart of the meaning of the university and the purpose of the School of Public Policy. It constitutes a serious breach of professional ethics and it is unacceptable.

Plagiarism is the use of another’s words or ideas presented as one’s own. It includes, among other things, the use of specific words, ideas, or frameworks that are the product of another’s work. Honesty and thoroughness in citing sources is essential to professional accountability and personal responsibility. Appropriate citation is necessary so that arguments, evidence, and claims can be critically examined.

Plagiarism is wrong because of the injustice it does to the person whose ideas are stolen. But it is also wrong because it constitutes lying to one’s professional colleagues. From a prudential perspective, it is shortsighted and self-defeating, and it can ruin a professional career.

The faculty of the School of Public Policy takes plagiarism seriously and has adopted a zero tolerance policy. Any plagiarized assignment will receive an automatic grade of “F.” This may lead to failure for the course, resulting in dismissal from the University. This dismissal will be noted on the student’s transcript. For foreign students who are on a university-sponsored visa (e.g. F-1, J-1 or J-2), dismissal also results in the revocation of their visa.

To help enforce the SPP policy on plagiarism, all written work submitted in partial fulfillment of course or degree requirements must be available in electronic form so that it can be compared with electronic databases, as well as submitted to commercial services to which the School subscribes. Faculty may at any time submit student's work without prior permission from the student. Individual instructors may require that written work be submitted in electronic as well as printed form. The SPP policy on plagiarism is supplementary to the George Mason University Honor Code; it is not intended to replace it or substitute for it.

Classroom Courtesy

Civility and respect toward all members of the class are expected; disagreements among members of the class (or with the instructor) are useful and illuminating, but mutual respect is mandatory. If you use a laptop, taking notes is fine. Using the laptop to surf the Internet or send e-mail is not acceptable.
